

Greetings!

It is our pleasure to welcome you to the 2022 World Economic Conference Live from Orlando! As global events continue to unfold, following patterns we've been highlighting for years, we have many past attendees returning for this event, along with some joining us for the first time, all with a common understanding of how important this event is. It's one not to be missed!

The three days of the event will be full of informative discussions. By the end of the conference, we hope you leave with a newfound outlook on the global economy and a better understanding of what may be coming next as we enter the next stage of the Monetary Crisis in 2032.

Whether you are joining online or in-person, are a first-time attendee, or returning, this event is one of the most significant that we've hosted so far, as events ahead are likely to have a lasting impact for years to come.

Please locate your order confirmation email, which you should've received shortly after completing your ticket purchase (check your spam folder as well). This email contains your admission ticket if you are attending in person. However, as most of you are attending online, this email includes a button and code to access the Livestream. You can join the Livestream at any time during the session or watch the recording later. Please refer to the handout 'How to Access the Livestream' in the welcome packet for more detailed instructions on accessing the Livestream. Then as we are recording the session, we plan to make it available to all ticket holders as quickly as possible, but we ask everyone to bear with us with this new process.

Also, as last year, we will have a portal to submit questions to be considered for the Q&A sessions with Marty and a Q&A with Erwin Pletsch during the Sunday morning session (included for in-person attendees and virtual plus ticket holders). To support both in-person and online attendees, only questions submitted via the portal and which are applicable to the broad general audience will be considered. Questions selected to be answered will be subject to the team's discretion and addressed on a best-effort basis. Please see the enclosed flyer to learn more about submitting questions via Slido directly.

Again, we will offer an Event App for all-in-one access to everything needed for the conference. Before the start of the session, all attendees will receive an invitation from the 'Mobile Event App Team'. Joining the app is optional, but it offers a simple way to access the Livestream, Slido app to submit questions, the document portal for materials, and even an option to connect with others for in-person and virtual plus ticket holders. Joining is easy; follow the prompts. We also enclosed step-by-step instructions for your convenience.

Please refer to the conference itinerary for meeting times and room information. Staff will be present throughout the weekend to assist. If you have any concerns or questions, please contact us at Conferences@armstrongeconomics.com or via Slido directed to @Staff. We will be actively checking our e-mails at this address throughout the weekend.

Thank you and enjoy the conference!

Kind regards,

The Armstrong Economics Team
